British Science Week

It is British Science week next week. The children will be involved in some science related activities within the academy to celebrate, however you can get involved in this as home. The website Explorify is a fantastic resource and has links to many topics. It is free to sign up to and there are many activities to spark discussions such as identifying the 'odd one out' from images or looking at photographs zoomed in close. Please follow the link and join in with the activities.

Reminders

Our children are normally very good at playing nicely and using kind words in the academy. However, just recently class teachers and senior leaders have had to speak to some children and parents about not playing nicely or using kind words. Could you please reinforce to your child/children what behaviour is expected whilst they are in the academy. Thank you for your continued support.

Weather

As the weather is so unpredictable can we please make sure that children have coats, gloves, and hats.
Thank you.

RED
NOSE
